MASTER'S MESSAGE

Time marches on and here we are installed as the Master already and writing the January message. It seems as we get older time speeds up.

As I said at the installation I would like to have some ladies' evenings where they would be entertained with wine tasting or by some fashion individual while we are in the lodge, and then we would all dine together on some culinary delight created by our newly installed JW, Bro Arnold, and no doubt assisted by our new SW, Bro Rico.

We will also enjoy some formal education during the year along with some "points of view" education where I or someone will speak on subjects like "Jack the Ripper" and the concept that he was a Freemason. Bethel No 9, Job's Daughters, be with us in February to demonstrate their rituals. It will also be the Official Visit of R W Bro Joel Segal, DDGM for the 13th District, in February.

Through the year we will try to make the lodge evening informative and entertaining. A strong effort will be made to encourage those who have not attended lodge night for a while to visit with us and enjoy the fellowship.

Christmas will be upon us as you read this. Rita and I wish you a wonderful Christmas and a safe and healthy 2010.

Peter Barclay, Worshipful Master

THE MEANING OF "ECCLESIASTES"

Most Brethren are familiar with a portion of the Book of Ecclesiastes. This Book, as a whole, has an author who reflects deeply on the frustrations of human existence, and has become disappointed in the so-called good things of life. Yet, in spite of his pessimism, he advises his readers to work hard, to be moderate in all things, and to enjoy the gifts of God as much and as long as they can. Although the first section is written in the person of Solomon, the subject matter and language make it clear that the book is the work of an unknown writer who lived centuries later, perhaps 350 B.C. Ecclesiastes is thus one of the latest books to be admitted into the canon of Hebrew Scripture.

More especially, Eccles. 12:1-7 paints a picture of bodily decay caused by old age; of the human body compared to a ruined house; desire has failed and nothing pleases. There is a warning to prepare for the coming tragedy of the Master's death.

This is one of the classic passages in the English language and one of the noblest poems in any language. Chapter 11, verse 9 and 10 form a preface to this poem. "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes; but know thou that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment. Therefore remove sorrow from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh; for childhood and youth are vanity." Here the theme of Chapter 12 is anticipated. It is the advice to a young man to enjoy his youth, but to remember that it is entrusted to him by God, and that he is answerable to God for the way he uses it. Old age with all its infirmities will inevitably come. Seize the opportunities of youth before they leave, as leave they will.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." (here is a reminder that "The days of our years be threescore and then; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow").

While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened" (youth lives in the sunlight, and even at night the moon and the stars give illumination; but these blessings are not forever; darkness comes to the elderly); "nor the clouds return after the rain" (youth is a time of refreshing showers, but as one grows older the clouds gather).

AT THE MERIDIAN

It is indeed a wonderful moment for me to be elected and installed as your Junior Warden. I know the chair in the South deals with more duties and a lot more of responsibilities which I consider as a big challenge. I will give my extra effort to fit in this position and if we work together, we will make a difference. I am positive that this is a start of another good year ahead of us. I would like to extend my heartfelt thanks to my family, my wife Jenith, my daughters Joice Ashley and Abegail Jane and son, Arnold Jr. for their enormous support in all the things I love to do, most specially my commitment to Masonry.

Also, my congratulations to the new set of officers for the year 2010 of Capitol Lodge No 136.

Have a safe and glorious Christmas and bountiful New Year to all.

Arnold Calambacan, Sr, Junior Warden

The Meaning of Freemasonry

The question is as simple as it is complex. Allegory wrapped in symbolism, the ability to make good men better, or a society with secrets; all quaint and witty one liners that help explain this complex organization to those who are ignorant to the craft. However, an all-encompassing answer is just as easily explained.

The meaning of Freemasonry is best described as such: In a world of endless choices and countless temptations, this elaborate and ever changing fraternity has a way of teaching a simple principle to every individual no matter where they live or what they believe in. That principle is explains that while wealth, title, and fame can easily be stripped from a man. All he really has in this world is his word, his honor, and his integrity. These are the key to a great life and a great man. Without them you are nothing, with them you are all you will ever need to be.

That is the meaning of Freemasonry. It is the ability to understand and become all you ever need to be.

Bro Wachter, Merchantville Lodge No 119, Pennsauken, NJ

With imagery and startling analogy the writer describes old age. "In the days when the keepers of the house shall tremble" (the hands and arms shake), "and the strong men shall bow themselves" (the legs become bent), "and the grinders cease because they are few" (with age the teeth fall out), "and those that look out of the windows be darkened" (the eyesight fails);

"And the doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low" (with old age comes loss of hearing, and the outside world becomes cut off), "and he shall rise up at the of the bird" (the old man wakens with the birds), "and all the daughters of music shall be brought low" (the quavering voice will be without tune);

"Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high" (heights are terrifying), "and the almond tree shall flourish" (the hair becomes as white as almond blossoms), "and the grasshopper shall be a burden" (the withering old man drags himself along), "and desire shall fail" (he has no appetite), "because man goeth to his long home." (death is near), "and the mourners go about the streets" (the professional mourners stand around waiting to be hired);

"Or ever the silver cord be loosened" (before the cord of life snaps), "or the golden bowl be broken" (before the cup of life becomes cracked and the contents drain away), "or the pitcher be broken at the fountain" (death comes to some in the midst of their work), "or the wheel broken at the cistern" (man is a fragile mechanism which fails into disuse)."

The writer admonishes us to make good use of the days we have before inevitable death arrives. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was" (earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust); "and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it" (the spirit of man returns to his long home to be with his creator).

The surrounding darkness of the lodge room and the presence of the emblems of mortality continue to emphasize the ever-present threat of death, but the word of Ecclesiastes has hinted at a new dimension: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Here the candidate is reminded of a new dimension of life which the eye of reason cannot penetrate.

The Book of Ecclesiastes concludes: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."
